

The Ramayana

The Multiple Gods held a meeting because they were troubled,
Of all the problems that the demon, Ravana had bubbled.

Brahma had granted Ravana with a deal,
From a god or a demon there would be no pain he would feel.

So Vishnu stated "I will be reborn into human and defeat the demon!"
And Samsara turns him into the 3 sons of King Dasharata and the deed was done.

The eldest of the sons, Rama is soon to be king, King Dasharata thinks of the good fortune that he will bring.

But Queen Kaikeyi is feeling jealous and scared,
and reminds the King a promise should not be marred.

So through the king's binding oath Rama is regrettably exiled,
along with Siti and Lakshmana who follow him into the wild.

And though King Dasharata died, Rama still did not return,
For the oath was binding and he could not leave it to burn.

When Surpanakha, Ravana's sister wished Rama to marry her, Rama solemnly declared something like, "I will never!"

And heartbroken Surpanakha screeches for harm to be done to Rama,
A nasty plan unfolded all because of Ravana.

Jatayu follows his Dharma and protects Sita,
But Sita is taken and Jatayu is killed by Ravana.

After Sita is taken, Rama asks for help to Hanuman,
He goes to find Sita and soon leaves and is gone.

So Hanuman sets out to find Rama's wife,
And finds Sita with the demon having a harsh life.

Hanuman goes to Rama and tells him the news, and Rama and his army defeats Ravana and the demons loose.

The prince has fulfilled his Dharma and returns to his kingdom,
With his wife by his side, and now sitting on the throne, it would be hard not to be glum.

They live happily ever after, Sita and Prince Rama,
and so that is the story of the Ramayana.

